The study of human myasthenic sera and their effects on purified acetylcholine receptor: its possible role in thymectomy. In the present study, the effects of myasthenic sera on purified acetylcholine receptor (AChR) were examined. Eighteen of 30 myasthenic patients' sera was reacted with purified AChR and the number of unlabeled rosettes was counted. There was no significant difference between the number of myasthenic sera and non-myasthenic sera reactive with purified AChR (p greater than 0.05). Furthermore, purified AChR reacted with normal sera obtained from six healthy human volunteers. The purified AChR was preincubated in myasthenic sera for different periods of time and then reacted with the same purified AChR. Purified AChR was shown to be one of the receptors of myasthenic sera on the way of neuromuscular transmission. These studies suggest that the patients may have received thymus dysfunction at an early stage and the thymus dysfunction may take part in the pathogenesis of th

The Nova Scotia Veterinary College (NSVC) is seeking funding support for the execution of a quality-control plan for a Veterinary Pharmacology/Toxicology Research Program at the NSVC. The objectives are to provide strong educational, research and professional development opportunities for all veterinarians in Nova Scotia, and to build an inter-disciplinary research environment based on a community of veterinarians, medicine and science. The proposed Veterinary Pharmacology/Toxicology Research Program will be based on an Administrative and Student Development core and three Research Cores: (1) Behavioral Pharmacology, (2) Studies of ADME and (3) Tumor Targeted Therapies. The Program will develop a strong support infrastructure at the college and partner with universities across

North America. Major components of the Program are (1) a postgraduate course in Clinical Pharmacology and Pharmacology for Veterinarians and (2) graduate and Postdoctoral Research Program. The overall aim of the Program is to provide students the opportunity to gain the skills to use pharmacology to improve health and disease in people and animals, and to lead a research program that investigates the efficacy of alternative therapies in addition to traditional pharmaceutical medicines. A clear understanding of the pharmacology and toxicology of drugs and other related chemicals is required to develop safer drugs and to provide effective therapies. To meet this goal NSVC proposes a basic research training program that consists of a broad based exposure to pharmacology and pharmacokinetics, and

I am using Elixir 0.12.2, Erlang 17 and Groovy 2.5.0 A: There is a module, collections, that has a group_by/2 function that might help you. Something like this: `def index_by_key(coll, key) do coll |> Enum.group_by(fn({x, _}) -> x end) |> Enum.into(Enum.empty) end` I tested this in Elixir 0.12.0 and Groovy 2.5.0. `Enum.reduce(coll, [], fn({e, v}, acc) -> Map.put(acc, e, v) end)` can be seen as `Map.put(acc, key, v)` where `key = e` `Map.put(acc, e, v)` where `key = e` Isabelle Sunday, 4
