"But wait, you're telling me that I, as a white male, don't have a right to express my outrage? You're saying that as a member of a hated minority I can't actually say that white people are bad? I actually have to go and be all formal and listen to people like you who know less about America than I do? : . Digital Drive - . still from the film It's a Guy Thing, from the book, Daddy's Boy by Adam Mansbach [BoingBoing] "But wait, you're telling me that I, as a white male, don't have a right to express my outrage? You're saying that as a member of a hated minority I can't actually say that white people are bad? I actually have to go and be all formal and listen to people like you who know less about America than I do? "The difference is that in the case of the anti-Trump rally, the person not giving the speech had no protection to express their outrage to us. While Trump obviously does deserve condemnation for using Twitter, he also isn't an elected official, and there is no comparable protection afforded for him. So I'm choosing to stand with the CNN protesters." Don't Like His Point, Don't Like His View - The New Yorker, November 28, 2016 (CNN) The difference is that in the case of the anti-Trump rally, the person not giving the speech had no protection to express their outrage to us. While Trump obviously does deserve condemnation for using Twitter, he also isn't an elected official, and there is no comparable protection afforded for him. So I'm choosing to stand with the CNN protesters..

[Chib] "I'm speaking as a human being, not as a journalist, but the image that the White House is trying to sell of this political event is off. The impression that this is a friendly gathering is misleading."
